

Performance

It's what it takes to carry the weight of more than 31,000 tonnes of vital cargo on 75-100 voyages each season – over a marine highway as long as the Atlantic Ocean is wide. It is a pathway of success driven by customers' needs.

It takes superior seamanship and world-class technology to deliver on-time, often under challenging conditions, to any of 110 ports in Canada and the USA, self-unloading up to 6,000 tonnes per hour. But to continually exceed customers' expectations takes more. It takes people who are dedicated and capable. Service-oriented people who really know and understand the Canadian marine transportation business. People like Captain Almer Strong, M/V PETER R. CRESSWELL.
